Using Photoshop After you open Photoshop, your first choice is to load a project that holds all of your images. Click the Windows key on your keyboard, and look for a small folder icon with a floppy disk and a laptop in front of it, as shown in Figure 4-11. Right-click the icon and select Open. PhotoChop has no such icon, so you will need to press Ctrl+O to open Photoshop, as shown in Figure 4-12.

Figure 4-11 Launch Photoshop by clicking the icon with a floppy disk. Figure 4-12 Use the Ctrl+O shortcut to launch Photoshop. After the program opens, find the name of the folder you opened in the drop-down menu on the upper-left side of the screen. To select a new folder, drag the folder icon from the `_Select_` folder icon to your desktop. If you select a folder of images, Photoshop scans for all the images and creates a `_project_` that holds the images in groups called `_layers_`. Multiple layers are useful for creating different effects and edits to the images in a single file. You can also use Photoshop to open the image directly in the `_layers_` that create it. The steps to import images, create a new image, and launch the image in the program are the same for all types of images; you just have to be aware of the elements that make up each type of image. To open an existing Photoshop project, follow these steps: 1. Click the Windows icon again, and open the folder containing the file you want to open. 2. Click the file and drag it from the desktop to the workspace. 3. Select File and launch Photoshop. Click the File tab on the upper-left side of the Photoshop window and select Open, if it's not already open. For now, select only Open and not Save, as this is a new project. When a new Photoshop project opens, the program automatically locates the

Q: SASS - Print to specified file Is it possible to specify the file where CSS should be outputted? I'm using SASS, and I would like to print my css to a certain file, like print ($file, $css-content, $css-output) Can I do that in SASS? I'm also able to mix this in Ruby/Rails. I tried @print('~css/articles/${filename}', $css-content, $css-output); But I get a compile error: Error: An @include or @extend directive is not allowed here. @print('~css/articles/${filename}', $css-content, $css-output); ^

What's New in the?

Oh, my. I've just been completely snookered by a trailer I've seen online. It's for the 2006 horror, The Crow. There are a lot of films about cults and demons out there, but this one seems to be the one most influenced by The Crow. And I don't mean that The Crow is the best cult movie to come out in the past five years. I'm not a fan of horror films that can be simplified as "the Crow is back!" films. The moments that I've found most exploitative have been done with the force of The Crow itself, or its dying "song," rendered in such a way as to sound like evil. But, on the other hand, the film seems to be selling itself by appearing to be not about a cult, but a group of people on a journey to discover something. That's what I saw in the first trailer and this one. I don't know. What can I say? I love a lot of horror movies, especially classic horror movies. I've watched the kinds of films on the "cult" movies list mentioned. And I've made my own list of movies that are not about cults, but about something else. But, well, I'm not sure I've ever seen a horror film so obviously trying to be an anti-cult movie as this one appears to be.
